BRERETON AND WOTTON, .29, Queen's Read. Hongkong, Solicitors for the Shoong On Fire Insurance Company, Limited. NOTICE.

THE Undersigned Firm has been established in Hongkong for more than THIRTY YEARS, and has never had a branch establishment anywhere. All Orders for Goods have been executed nuder our own supervision and the best of materials used. We have always enjoyed the patronage and confidence of the Gentry and Merchants of Hongkong and Ports near and far, but now we are afraid that as another firm has lately been started having a SIMILAR HONG NAME, our Customers may be misled and induced to think It is identical with ours.

Accordingly we give notice that we have no CONNECTION WITH ANY OTHER FIRM, and respectfully ask our Customers and the Public to pay particular attention to our Address, given below, and our Chop, which is stamped on all our Goods, and without which none are genuine.

THE announcement contained in the Reuter's telegram, published in another column, has not come unexpectedly. It was stated some days ago that the Ministry, following former precedents, would resign so soon as Her Majesty returned to Windsor, and of course before the meeting of the new Parliament. It was not likely that Lord Bracows-FIELD would think of continuing at the helm of affairs with such a diminished following as the elections have given him. As an addition to our stock of suphemistic expression, we may notice that Judas is said to have gone "unto his own place"-a "profound and reverent exphemism, and one of the many traces of the reticence with which the early church spoke of the fate of those who had departed." We are strongly inclined to think that the expression "fallen asleep" is really a suphemism for death. (But see "Life of Paul," L, 167). A Chinaman speaking to us the other day said that though certain evidence might now be wanting, when we returned (fan hu) it would be made plain. He was alluding to the passage, "What I do thou knowest not now, but thou shall know bereafter." Fan hu meant " when we die."

The Chinese have a saying that if one sleeps in stockings and shoes he will soon die. The reason is that when a dead person is laid out he is prosided with those articles of clothing; and in this custom we have another means of comparing the Chinese with other Eastern and western people. The ancient Icelanders put shoes on the feet of the dead that they might not be footsore in making their journey." Amongst the paper articles of clothing burned by the Celestials, shoes occupy a very prominent place, for the questio . These facts appear to indicate prenter safety on the roads than existed even so late as 1876, when a curavan of the Kamenski house was plundered, and, indeed, hitherto such occurrences have been periodical. But security of person and property is only one of several conditions required for Russian trade in Mongolia, Manchuria, Chungaria, and Western Chiua generally, Many restrictions have to be removed, some of which seem very small matters, but are very disabling to trade. For example under existing Chinese laws, all bills must be drawn in the Chinese language auch as the speech of the country is Mongolian, and Chinese interpreters are practically unknown, one can easily imagine what a difficulty is created by this apperently harmless ordinance. Again, the money of the interior consists of speep and brick-tes, but these are Chinese products in which foreigners are forbidden to trade, and consequently Russian. merchants being interdicted from using these recognised forms of money, must carry a monk of silver with them wherever they go, at obvious risk and inconvenience. Difficulties are also raised about their opening shops; it is not lawful for Chinese subjects to enter their service, and a host of other petty discouragements combine to damp enterprise. In spite of all this. experiment has proved that Russian goods can drive Chinese out of the market. THE NEW BRITISH ISLAND.

Lord Beaconsfield is about to add another island to the many already under the British Crown, but it is only a little one. "Rotumah" lies north of the Fiji gropp; it is six miles long by two and a half broad, and is fertile and thickly populated. With the exception of the mission aries the population is purely native of the Fiji type. All the islanders are Christians, and belong to different sects who detest one another with an almost Bulgarian ferocity. They have entrested the English Governor of neighbouring Fiji to annex them to the British Crown. He has given a conditional assent. The fighting chiefs of Rotuman declars themselves willing to drop their swords and daggers, if requested to do so in the Queen's name. They are celebrated for making mats and the men are admirable sailors. Though the island is fertile, they leave home early, and when asked why, they always answer, "Our young mea will not submit to the harsh rules of the missionaries." Some of the regulations laid down by these. well meaning pioneers of civilisation seem ex tremely absurd. They impose fines on men for walking past the Palace without European olothes! The people also are heavily taxed for the maintenance of the missions. There is something sad in the fact that many islands in DAVID CORSAR & SONS' the Pacific and elsewhere were abodes of peace until Christians come to teach the inhabitants how to pray-and also, it must be added, how to drink and light. The career of the mutineers of the Bounty affords a onrious case in point. After many days at sea they came to an island in the Pacific where Nature had provided everything for their sustenance and delight. The place was fertile, the people very kind, and they were received with open hospitality. Wives and land were given, to them; and, as their female helpmates cultivated the soil, they had nothing to do but to lie like lotus-esters, enjoying the fruits of the earth. They repaid the generosity of their poor hosts by killing every native male on the island; and they then divided the widows among themselves, so that each had about 13 wivesa liberal allowance, even for a sailor. A short neace preveiled, but a war between the wellprovided hasbands soon broke out. One coveted another's wife, and, as the crew took sides, the fight which followed was pursued, with intermissions, until every English sailor was killed, with the exception of John Adams, the ringleader of the crow. Then, finally, came a lasting peace. The whole native population obeyed this one remaining representative of the dominant race; be taught them as much of the Christian doctrine as he gould remember. "converted." them all, living to a good old age. The island had several advantages; there were no publichouses, no standing armies, no landlords, no taxs. tion, no Established Church, no King. Yet one of the flercest wars in history desolated the country, for we know of no previous contest where the belligerants left as sole survivor only a single man. The precedent almost induces us to believe that a Parliament in College-green might not

INGLISH AND CHINESE DICTIONARY. WITH THE PUNTI AND MANDARIN PRONUNCIATION. Anglo-Chinese Dictionary published at the IMPERIAL QUARTO.

Daily Press Office, Hongkong.

For comprehensiveness and practical dervice this Work stands unrivalled. All the new words which the Chinese have to late years been compelled to coin to express the numerous objects in machinery, photography, telegraphy and in science generally, which the rapid advance of foreign relations has imposed upon them, are here given in extenso. Each and every word is fully illustrated and explained, forming exercises for students of a most instructive nature. Both the Court and Punti pronunciations are given, the accents being carefully marked on the best principle hitherto stinied. The typography displays the success of an attempt to make the Chinese and English type correspond in the size of body, thereby effecting a vast economy of space; schieving a clearness not previously attained, and dispensing with those vast margins
